Connecting & Supporting Families Whose Children are Visually Impaired, Including Those with Additional Disabilities

April 2019

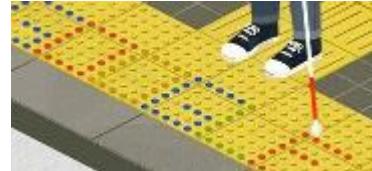

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Filiberto Almendarez III

Happy April IPVI families. I would like to share some history that you may or may not know. There was a man in Japan, who in 1965 wanted to help his friend who was losing his sight. Using his own money, he began to work on a way to alert the blind when approaching danger. He developed two designs. One had raised dots that alerted the blind when danger was near like a road crossing. The other had solid bars signaling guidance as a directional aid along a safe path. The different textures allowed a blind/visually impaired individual to feel their way with their shoes, a cane, or with the help of a guide dog. His hope was to help people travel safely through the streets. Another objective was to make sure they could board a train safely. This amazing person is Seiichi Miyake. His creation was unveiled on March 18, 1967. A bumpy pavement, tactile paving, originally known as Tenji blocks. Now, it's the 52nd anniversary of its unveiling on a street near the Okayama School for the Blind in Okayama City, Japan. His ingenious invention was then rolled out across Japan and made mandatory across its railway stations within a decade. The tactile paving is now a feature of cityscapes worldwide helping the blind navigate. The United States picked up the standard in the early 1990s. As for Chicago, the Tenji blocks are all over streets, sidewalks, subway and more. Thank You, Mr. Seiichi Miyake!

It's amazing to have unknown friends all over the world. Helping pave the way to boundless opportunities.

Take care and keep moving forward.

Why It's OK to Ask Me About My Special Needs Child

By Nicole Feeney

When you see my daughter, please ask questions! I believe it is my role to educate others about being deafblind and how this shapes (but doesn't define) my child. READ MORE at:

Teamwork: The (Special) Needs Family

By John Bateman

John Bateman writes about the importance of including all your kids in all activities. When you have a child with special needs it may seem appropriate to keep their activities and therapies separate from your typically developing children, but that's just not realistic. READ MORE at:

Sharing on behalf of the Arc of Illinois-

Three legislative bills have moved out of committee and are on second reading: HB 3299, Sex Education for Individuals with I/DD, (Representative Will Davis), and HB 2987, Protection of Individuals with Disabilities in the Criminal Justice System Task Force Act, (Representative Rob Martwick). SB 111, Dental Sedation Bill is voted out of the Senate and moves to the House.

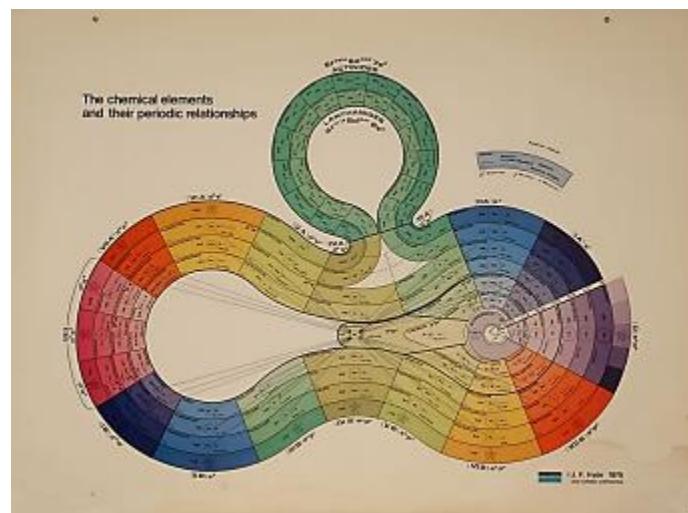

Although there are many bills that will move the next two weeks, this year, the Senate has created a Medicaid subcommittee/workgroup where all bills impacting healthcare. They will be costing out and holding onto many bills until closer to the end of session when the budget will be discussed. This includes SB2021, the Protect Our Care Coalition efforts around improving medicaid re-determination. In addition, there is Subcommittee on Special Issues set up to move all bills that are expected to have a significant fiscal impact. Many of these ordinarily would move to the Human Services Committee but are being redirected and a fiscal impact estimated before they move into this subcommittee. It is an effort to coordinate and think broadly about the bills that the Senate will move with budget impact. Senator Steans is leading this effort. Our bill SB2086, around non-Medicaid Certified Homes will potentially wind up in this subcommittee among other bills. In addition, right now SB2055, which deals with PUNs transparency, communication and update also is being held there.

Did you know 2019 is the International Year of the Periodic Table?

A staple of STEM and featured in all chemistry and most biology textbooks, the periodic table was devised by the Russian chemist Dmitri Mendeleev in 1869. This rectangular chart presented the 63 elements known at the time in a way that organized them according to shared properties and predicted the existence of elements not yet discovered. In the 150 years since its creation, 55 elements have been added and all 118 elements now reside in their proper places on the chart. While Mendeleev's periodic table is the most well-known presentation of the elements, in the years since its inception, other arrangements of the elements have been devised including spirals, helices, and zigzags.

An easier periodic table to read:
